finally, a 3d printer distributes each of those layers, over and over again in the chosen medium, which could be plastic, resin, or something else, to build the object